A display of books by well known publishers in the library of Appomattox High School Thursday, April 9, brought a good response, according to Miss Julia Asher, the librarian.

Between twenty and thirty "orders" of books are submitted each year for the local high school, she says, in an arrangement with the state of Virginia whereby the County puts up $20 and the state, $40 for each $60 order of books.

High school and elementary teachers were invited to view the books in order to recommend selections for the coming school year. Companies represented were J. B. Lippincott & Co., Philadelphia; Houghton- Mifflin Boston; and Follett Publishing Co., Chicago.

280,000 Cancer Deaths In 1963

Last year cancer "caused the deaths of some 280,000 Americans," according to the 1963 Annual Report of the American Cancer Society, distributed this week by the Society's Virginia Division.

"It took the lives of more school children and more young women than any other disease, the report points out, adding: "For the last ten years, cancer has been the chief disease cause of death in women from 15 to 54 years of age."

On the hopeful side the report noted that "mortality from cancer of the uterus has dropped 50 per cent in a generation." Continuing hopefully in this line, wider utilization of the "Pap" smear test for uterine cancer.

Welford Roger Brown, charged in an indictment from the grand jury of malicious assault, pleaded guilty to the lesser and was given a one year sentence, suspended, plus the costs of trial.
